Scintilla Case Study: Georgia Pacific The opportunity:

Due to changing consumer behavior, Georgia-Pacific saw a need for an inflation-fighter pack option for price-conscious consumers who want a premium product experience at an opening price point.

The pack had three goals

- Retain households in the category
- Minimize tier trade down
- Create opportunities to drive trade up

The result: Customer-centric collaboration

Scintilla revealed a clear path to action in response to changing consumer behaviors.

Understand the category and consumer

- See how inflationary pressures are changing consumer behavior
- Understand how that change in consumer behavior is impacting the category
- Evaluate future risks and opportunities

Meet consumer needs through the right assortment

- Home in on assortment gaps
- Identify target consumer groups
- Define the role the item will play in the assortment
- Provide a store list to best meet needs

Quantify size of prize

- Attract/retain new households
- Remain in the premium segment
- Drive trade up from mainstream to premium items

Track performance

 Monitor results to ensure items are delivering on these key metrics
